The Lion of the Day.

FRESH TRACKS DISCOVERED-SOME WELL-AUTHENTICATED FACTS-A LADY CONFRONT-ED BY THE BEAST IN AN OPEN ROAD - ATTEMPT TO BREAK IN A HOUSE.

So many unsatisfactory accounts of the Hanover lion having reached Richmond, some alarming the public mind, others provoking the sneers of the overwise, and others still arousing the belief that the whole story was but the "sell" of a cross-roads' wag, a representative of this paper, accompanied by a distinguished gentleman of scientific reputation, yesterday started forth into the rural districts, resolved to see the animal, or his tracks, or to know the reason why. The latest information they could get was that the so-called lioness had been seen on Mr. J. V. Darricott's farm, on the Brook turnpike, about five miles from the city. In that direction, behind two fast horses, they proceeded. At the toll-gate, near Mr. Stewart's, the oung gentleman who came out to collect he tolls was hurriedly interviewed.

Have you seen anything of a lion in these Haven't seen him myself, but at Mr. Daricott's they have seen him, or his tracks, vas the prompt response.

At this juncture one of the ablest and best of the youngish members of the Richthat his friends, the reporter and the scientist, were on a lion-hunt, with lawyer-like propensity he began to doubt the existence of the beast.

There were plenty of these tracks. Mr. Warwick said (and so did Mr. Darricott afterwards) that he was sure they were not made by any animal common in this portion of the country. What they were he would not undertake to say.

From the field to Mr. Darricott's house is only about a quarter of a mile. There the

Mr. E. G. Blair, a very rehable young gentleman, is authority for this statement. He was cross-questioned by our reporter: Did you see any tracks on the ground near the parlor-window? Yes, indeed, I did. Did they look like the tracks of any animal, wild or domestic, known in this part of the State? That they didn't.

What was the size? Well, about four inches across the spread. This exploit of the animal would seem to ndicate that he is a bear. A lion would hardly go fumbling into a parlor-window. And Mrs. Darricott says that at one time she thought the object in the road was a drunken man walking on his hands and SNAKES IN THE CITY .- A moccasin snake about thirty inches long was killed yesterday near the circus lot, on First and Jackson streets. There was a temporary excitement in the neighborhood, and after the snake was dispatched with clubs, hoes, and pokers it was suggested that the dead reptile had been killed the previous day and deposited in a hole made by a tent-pole. On the other hand, it was claimed that the snake was first discovered alive yesterday in the hole by a little boy, who wanted to pull it out with one of his little hands, but didn't. The neighbors say the snake is one menagerie. He probably got loose the same time the "lioness" did.
